Wake Forest Clinical and Translational Science Institute (CTSI)

During this unprecedented time of the COVID-19 pandemic, Wake Forest’s Clinical and Translational Science Institute (CTSI) has navigated significant challenges the pandemic has presented to best support our research community. Our poster will communicate several areas where our CTSI has promoted COVID-19 research activities, facilitated the implementation of research new policies impacted by COVID, educational offerings, and programs and services to ensure the continuation of research during this time continue to thrive. Additionally, we will provide perspective on how these changes have impacted planning and long-term implications for the future.